

TULSA WORLD

Tulsa chefs unite for fundraiser to benefit tornado victims

BY SCOTT CHERRY World Scene Writer

Thursday, June 06, 2013

Some of Tulsa's top chefs and about 35 local restaurants are teaming to hold a fundraiser for young tornado victims on June 22 at the Tulsa Convention Center.

Chef Aid, conducted in cooperation with Tulsa Community Foundation, will benefit children affected by the recent Oklahoma tornadoes.

The dinner, beginning at 6:30 p.m., will include food, wine, beer and live music for the all-inclusive cost of $75 per person. The event also will include a silent auction.

Chef Aid is being spearheaded by chefs Eli Huff, Michael Fusco, Devin Levine and Kenny Wagoner.

"I took food to Moore after the first round of tornadoes, and I didn't realize how bad it really was until I got there," Huff said. "When I got back I started thinking that there must be something Tulsa chefs and restaurants could do to help.

"I talked to Michael, Devin and Kenny, who all said they wanted to help, then the Tulsa Convention Center came on board. We decided we wanted to specifically help the children, and that's where Tulsa Community Foundation came in. They know how to do that."

Major sponsors include Staples, Salt Food Group, BOK Center, Cancer Treatment Centers of America, SMG and Tulsa Convention Center. Other sponsors so far include Ben E. Keith Co. and US Foods.

Corporate tables of 10 people each are available for $2,000 a table. Call 918-808-8074 to reserve a corporate table.

Individual tickets can be ordered at tulsaworld.com/chefaid (<http://tulsaworld.com/chefaid>).

Find a list of participating restaurants in Friday's Tulsa World.

Associated Images:

Eli Huff is one of the chefs who is organizing a fundraiser to benefit young victims of the recent tornadoes in Oklahoma City. STEPHEN PINGRY/Tulsa World

Copyright © 2013, Tulsa World All rights reserved.